

The ability to provide traffic and weather information to the public on a regional basis via satellite is a national security issue in that homeland security has another tool to communicate important information to the public.